Council Discuss Rules For Public at Fires Here

At the recent Town Council meeting the matter of fires and the conduct of bystanders was given considerable discussion and several resolutions were passed in this regard.

First: That no car or other vehicle other than those bringing Firemen to the scene be allowed to park within one block of the scene of the fire.

That anyone running over the fire hose with a vehicle while the hose is strung out on the ground be duly prosecuted.

The matters of hydrant locations and the purchase of a large siren also discussed.

The editor would also like to add a few suggestions of his own to those recommendations of the council. I feel that when the siren on the engine goes and the engine can be seen approaching on a street that all traffic should pull off to the side. I noticed the other day that one of the firemen was following the engine in his own car when a truck somehow got ahead of him and the fireman couldnt get by. Also there were so many cars all going the same way that the dust was almost impenitrable.

Another thing that would help a great deal is for people to curb their curiosity about the fire and not call the operator and ask where it is. The telephone operator has her hands full in locating the regular fire men and she has no way of telling which one of the myrid of calls that start coming in when the siren goes is important and which is not.

Lets keep the telephone lines clear for at least 20 minutes after the alarm is sounded.

180,000 PERSONS SEE PARKS IN ALBERTA

More than 483,000 persons visited the national parks in Alberta during the period up to the end of August according to information which the Alberta Motor Association has received from the provincial tourist travel bureau. This was only a slight increase over the previous year, actually 1,812.

While a much heavier tourist trek to Alberta had been expected this year, there were a number of factors which had the effect of holding back the inflow of visitors. Road conditions in some parts of the province were believed to be in part responsible.

Banff visitors increased by 40 to give a total of 271,892. Elk Island with 69,145 showed a gain of 17,8 while Waterton Lakes fell off by 55,180 to report a total of 82,238 while Jasper Park was 1,271 below the 1947 total at the end of August of 60,977.

While Alberta's gain was not as great as had been expected, it was nevertheless well ahead of the total of 400,678 in 1941, the last holiday motoring period before the U.S. entered the war.

Travel officials are confident that 1949 will see a large movement to Alberta providing world conditions are not upset by war.

FROM THE NILE
(Leigh Hunt)

It flows through old hushed Egypt and its sands.
Like some grave mighty thought threading a dream,
And times and things, as in that vision seem
Keeping along in their eternal stands.—
Caves, pillars, pyramids, the shepherd bands
That roamed through the young earth, the glory extreme
Of high Sesostris, and that southern beam,
The laughing queen that caught the world's great hands.

THE NEED TO WANT

by Joseph Lister Rutledge

If one were inclined to look on the dark side of things it would be easy to believe that liberty is a dying cause. In our tortured world there are millions in whom the urge to be free has burned to grey ashes, the dull hope of survival. They have lived too long in the shadow of fear, fear of hunger and imprisonment and torture and death for themselves and those they love. They have known the power of a wickedness that has wiped out for them, the kindlier teachings of two thousand years. Where they look forward at all their despairing vision sees no further than tomorrow's food and tomorrow's safety.

Let us not imagine that their case is not our case.They represent much more than half the people of Europe who dare not think or act for themselves. They occupy more than two-thirds of its acres. It is these hopeless millions who make the threat of another war so terrifying.

We still believe that the little undying spark in the human spirit that demands freedom is everywhere ready to break into flame. It is easy for us to believe. We have not lived under so near a threat. We devise and control and administer our own institutions. We think and act and speak as we choose. Not so the most of Europe. They are without food, and must be fed. But our obligation goes further than that. They are without hope. We have to help these shrinking millions who want to be free again. Peoples who believe in freedom are the only hope the only protection against the rapacious dreams of despots big and little who despoil a world.

Only free people dare to be generous. Only free people can think as a wold, with understanding of a world and consideration for its peoples. We have something to offer besides bread, something more precious and enduring. It is the confidence that man, made in the image of God, need not be subject to any despot whether that despot be a matter of misadventure and contriving.

Yes, we have to make those millions, who have learned to bow and compromise and accept, want to be free again.

That is what makes us wonder that so many people seem to be ready, so willingly, to sacrifice their personal, God-given rights for that fleeting promise of poitage that they call security. The people of Europe have learned to earn a measure of such safety by cringing before authority. To make them want to be free, shall we offer them only a little different brand by cringing, or the blue sky where only God is man's master?

CREDIT UNIONS

In April 1945, cash on hand was $2,312.89. $1989.50 had been loaned and $229.88 had been collected as interest. In April of this year cash on hand was $1599.58 and $6,387.50 was out in loans.

Last year, loans totaled $6,500 and interest received was $479.35

The first Credit Union in Canada was organized in Quebec in 1905 and they now have their own bank and loan to members free of interest charges.

This year we are celebrating the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Credit Unions and we hope it increases in popularity the next ten years as much as it has the last Credit Unions are organized among various groups of people to allow them to handle their own credit through co-operation. No profit is made by the Credit Union. After all operating expenses are met and a sum set aside for a guarantee fund, all earnings are turned back to the members through a dividend paid on shares and a patronage dividend to those that have borrowed money during the year. All loans outstanding are insured against death or permanent disability of the borrower Many people believe that the Credit Union movement is of recent birth and to them such is the case, in so much as they have only now become aware of its existence. While it is primarily to the work of Raiffeisen who organized in 1849 a society to lend money to the peasant in the vicinity of Flammersfield in Germany, that we on the American continent have turned for our guidance and inspiration, records show that the first co-operative Credit society using the name "Credit Union" was organized at Brussels in Belgium in 1848 by Francois Haeck. Our ancestry, however is distinctly German. Victor Huber, who lived from 1800 to 1869 wrote of co-operation in Germany; in fact one of his early theses was entitled "Credit Unions and Loan Unions". He as it were, played the overture to the great drama of co-operative action which was about to be enacted. And the great players were Herman Schulfe-Lolitzsh (1808 to 1883 and Frederick William Raiffeisen (1818—1888. Both experimented successfully with co-operative credit, and both evolved types of co-operative credit societies capable of rapid duplication eventually, not only in Germany but in all parts of the world.

Before leaving Germany it may be of interest to note again the economic conditions which gave such impetus to this development. It was a time of famine, and Raiffeisen was driven to his experiment with co-operative credit in a desperate effort to find some way of economic relief for his people in the little town of Flammersfield where he was mayor. During Raiffeisen's period 425 Credit Unions were organized and he was also instrumental in the development of a Central Union of his societies. After 1888 the spread in other parts of the world was very rapid.

CANADA 1900

Alphonse Desjardins brought the Credit Union to America. He was a journalist in Montreal—and as early as 1885 his interest in co-operative credit had been aroused by exposure to usurious money-lending in that city. He spent years studying the European precedents and organized the first Credit Union on the American continent in Levis, Quebec in 1900.

Desjardins told us: "The people's welfare can best be secured by institutions organized by the people themselves", and again. "Success for the young democracies of this continent depends on the prosperity and worth of life to the millions of working men who compose them", and again. "The People's Bank is the expression in the field of economics of a high social ideal. It is based on the high conception, wholly, just requitable and fruitful, of 'union for life' instead of "struggle for life."

UNITED STATES, 1908

The Credit Union idea was brought into United States in 1908 when Desjardins was invited to Boston, Massachusetts, to cooperate in the preparation of a bill which, enacted by the Massachusetts legislature of 1909, supplied the first working model for general state legislation having to do with co-operative banking in the United States.

My Week

by R. J. Deachman

A few days ago the Calgary Albertan carried a nice little story on barber shops. Men have long since ceased to worry about shaving. They leave that to Mr. Gillette and confine to shave themselves. There is an economic base for these things—we live in a changing world. There are so many avenues that new demand our cash that we mustsa ve some point. Certainly if a man wants to buy an automobile at present prices, and thousands do, he must be a man with a high income or he must practise a good deal of economy in other lines ofeffort.

This story in the Albertan gave me a touch of nostalgia. I remember at least one barber shop in Calgary. It was somewhere near the centre of the block between Centre and 1st Stree West on the North side of the street. I can close my eyes and see the faces of all the barbers who worked there then, I imagine that some have long since passed away. I remember too a great many of the customers I used to meet and the happy times I spent with them. If that shop is still running I will blow myself to a hair cut, leave Mr. Gillette to perform the balance of my toilet, the next time I am in Calgary.

I wonder if Stalin is laughing up his sleeve? Sometimes I think he is but perhaps that's not quite right for I can't imagine Stalin doing that. I think he indulges in a deep throaty chuckle when he is alone and begins to figure on how busy he is keeping the allies on the Western front while his subterranean legions thunder on through the east and then beyond. Communism is moving through China and Indo-China and the Islands of the Pacific. It may even be making progress in India. So long as density of population battles against diminishing means of sustenance these people will be willing to accept almost anything if it promises food, even if it does nothing but promise. The trouble is that the land and natural resources of India, China and the far East is incapable of providing the nutriment to maintain sound minds and healthy bodies. These countries just naturally go Communist and at the moment no one offers a solution to the problem.

This reminds me of another strange thing about Russia. It must have been about sixty years ago, an old tramp used to turn up at our house once or twice a winter and always on Saturday night. He referred to himself as a traveller but sold nothing, he was a tramp. He was quite an intelligent man, a bit o' ventriloquist and could do slight of hand tricks but the man subject of his talks was Russia and the menace of Russia to the British Empire He represented it as continuously pushing forward, striving for the ultimate conquest of the whole world. The name of this tramp was Shellis I remember his name down through the years. If his ghost could only look back over that long lapse of more than half a century he would be able to gather fresh inspiration for his talks about Russia, the menace of the world. He may have been right.

A chap in the United States claims that climatic variation is responsible for most of the things that happen in his world. Wars it seems start in hot dry seasons. When precipitation is abundant and the air is cooler people walk the ways of peace. He or one of his associates has studied the weather changes through the rings of the Sequoia trees of California. These are rare old trees. There is evidence to show that some of them started growing 1350 years before the birth of Christ. They are now well over 3000 years of age. If they could only speak to us what a story they could tell. This man who has studied them tells a story the trees have revealed to him. Through these rings he has marked the weather changes which have taken place through long periods of time. The growth of the rings designate the wet years and the hot eras right through the centuries. Then he has linked up the story told by the rings with the story from the pages of history and from it he decides that we have been less belligerent in cold wet weather than in hot dry perious. All of which makes the hope for an increase in precipitation over the long period of years so that I shall not see the coming of the next war.

SOLON LOW LAUDS SCOUTING

The Hon. Solon E. Low, M.P., Leader of the Social Credit Party of Canada has sent the following message to the Boy Scouts Association:

"Over man years of working with boys I have observed that those with Boy Scout Training are almost invariably self-reliant and quite able to exercise initiative to a high degree These qualities are fundamental to the pioneering spirit without which the present, and coming generation will not be able successfully to develop Canada into the great country that she can be.

"As the father of three sons, and on the occasion of its fortieth anniversary, I wish to extend to the Boy Scout Association of Canada my own personal thanks and congratulations for the great work it has done over the years in helping our boys to grow up into four-square Canadian Citzens'.]

the stage. He was Edward A Filene a Boston business man. He has been identified more definitely with forward thinking long economic lines than have any of his contemporaries among outstanding American businessmen of his time. Mr. Filene died in Paris on September 26, 1937.

CREDIT UNION NATIONAL ASSOCIATION

In 1921, Mr. Filene concluded that the time had come for the national extension of the Credit Union. He associated with him in this effort Mr. Roy F. Bergengren who became the executive Secretary of the Credit Union National Extension Bureau. The main object of the Bureau was to make it possible, by adequate legislation, to organize Credit Unions anywhere in the United States. The Bureau was a fore-runner to the Credit Union National Association (C-U-N-A) formed on March 1st 1935.

The development of Cuna is indicated by the fact at the first meeting 41 members representing 31 states were present whereas today nearly every state in the United States, and every province in the Dominion of Canada are represented on the Board. Since its formation Cuna has developed the Cuna Mutual Insurance Society, with Canadian Branch office at Hamilton, Ontario, handling savings and loan insurance for Credit Unions, the Cuna Supply Co-operative, handling accounting forms and the Cuna Insurance Research Division which is looking after the bonding of Credit Union employees.

We now have about 12,000 Credit Unions operating all over the American continent representing 4,000,000 members and resources now reaching close to a half billion dollars.

—The Bugle.

Three drunks stumbled into a tavern. The first weaved his way up to the bar and was able to stand up without hanging on; the second needed the bar to maintain his balance; the third fell on his face en route, and stayed there.

"What'll you have?" asked the bar tender.

"Scosh and shoda" chorused the two at the bar.

"And what's for you pal on the floor?"

"Oh, don't give him anything he's driving."

FOSTER HEWITT RECORD OVER 8,000 HOCKEY GAMES

When Foster Hewitt, known to millions of Canadians as Canada's "Voice of Hockey" appears before the Canadian Cavalcade microphone Tuesday, he will be a few weeks away from starting his 26th year of broadcasting. During the past 25 years he has painted word pictures of more than 2,000 hockey games and claims he has yet to call a wrong goal. Foster, who has been a radio announcer since the birth of commercial radio in Canada, got his early training as an ad-libber when he broadcast the arrival of the Empress of Britain at Quebec. Foster got on the air at 7 p.m. and kept talking for nearly four hours until the big ship came into berth.
